

DEA Museum Lecture Series

In honor of the 35th anniversary of the DEA, this spring's lecture series highlights Drug Kingpins Across the Decades, with panel discussions covering Nicky Barnes & Frank Lucas (1970s), Pablo Escobar (1980s), The Arellano-Felix Organization (1990s) and Haji Baz Mohammad (2000).

Drug Kingpins Across the Decades

Please Join us for the final presentation in our Spring 2008 lecture series:

Haji Baz Mohammad

Haji Baz Mohammad

Haji Baz Mohammad orchestrated an international heroin trafficking organization responsible for manufacturing and distributing more than $25 million worth of heroin in Afghanistan and Pakistan and then allegedly arranged for the heroin to be imported in to the United States and other countries and sold for tens of millions of dollars. He conspired to sell heroin in the United States as a "Jihad" because they were taking the American's money at the same time the heroin they were paying for was killing them. During the course of the conspiracy, the Baz Mohammad Organization provided financial support to the Taliban.
